Travis Graves from the Tribe will be in Vancouver Canada this Saturday for the first ever North American Parkour Championships. The competition will feature over 20 traceurs from all over North America. Even if you can't make it guess what! You can watch a live feed online. Read more for the link to the live feed and more information!

The event is being hosted by Origins Parkour & Athletic Facility, a parkour gym that opend its doors last September.

“They can expect to see stuff that they probably would otherwise think is impossible at this event,” Rene Scavington, owner and head coach of Origins Parkour said.

“If anything, we’re trying to advertise it as like a cheaper version of Cirque du Soleil,” he said with a laugh. “…Without all the theatrics and stuff, but you’ll get to see the same calibre of skill for sure.”

The organizers hope that this event will help set a standard for future competitions.

“The people that designed it and the people that we got feedback from are actual athletes. We’re listening to athletes,” he said. “We’re also athletes ourselves, so we know the kind of things that we want to do and want to see in competitions.”

Be sure to check it out! With Travis Graves competing against Members of Tempest Freerunning, Origins Parkour, Parkour Visions, and Apex movement you're sure to see some awesome movement!

Click here to read more about Origins Parkour .